I can't know how to play this game :D. good game but too short.. An interesting take on the HOG genre, but I found it too difficult to proceed in the ranks. The item finding was fun, and auctioning and price-setting was also fun, but I never made any money. That probably means I am bad at the game, but that is something the game should help with. I guess I would recommend this game is you like HOGs, with a bit of frustration.. Hidden Object with a twist. It's got some weird stuff in it, but it's enjoyable.. Simple mix of puzzle and strategy (money management). Worth a try.

This game is for people that hate their lives.. I luv waching piccers and this game was just like living in the van.. Very fun game in the beginning. I like that you can sell what you find and not just collect....but game needs to be bigger with more high priced and interesting objects. Gets a little old once you know where everything is. This format has a great deal of potential though. I would love to see an update for this, or even a completely new and better version.. Interesting take on the classic hidden object genre, where you buy the items that you find on the scenes and you sell or auction them afterwards in your store. Your goal is, of course, to make the maximum profit from every item that you buy. There is a huge variety of them, from simple clocks to one of a kind (and very pricey) items, such as a William Shakespeare's manuscript. The items are sorted in certain categories and every day different categories are listed as hot and give the most profit.The downsides of this game are its almost complete lack of voice overs and its price.. I have way to much fun with this game
